AMERICANS PROUD TO
WELCOME KING ALBERTHEROIC SACRIFICING LEADER OF BRAVE
LITTLE NATION LANDS ON AMERICAN
SOIL TODAY

FAMOUS FOR DEEDS OF VALOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The world's greatest democracy today welcomed loyalty's greatest democrat, King Albert, of Belgium. For the first time in history a king trod American soil when King Albert stepped ashore off the steamer George Washington at noon. American officialdom who planned to give the King his consort and heir, a royal welcome witnessed his landing through a down pour of rain.

BELGIAN RULERS ARRIVE

HOBOKEN, Oct. 2.—King Albert, of Belgium, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold landed here at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon.

FORT HANCOCK, Oct. 2.—The steamer George Washington with King Albert and the royal party aboard left Sandy Hook and started up the lower bay shortly after nine o'clock this morning. She was expected to pass quarantine about 10:30 a. m.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. (United Press).—King Albert of Belgium and his queen Elizabeth, arrived here today on this long-anticipated visit to the United States.

As they came up the bay they were given one of the most vociferous applause ever accorded a foreign visitor. Sirens screeched and thousands of boat and factory whistles, tooted out a noisy welcome to the heroic rulers of the little nation Germany trampled under foot.

They will visit several cities in various parts of the country after they have been feted here.

Albert was crowned on the death of his uncle, King Leopold II, the old king's only son having died. Albert and his queen, Elizabeth, who endeavored themselves by their heroic efforts to alleviate the sufferings of their subjects during the German occupation of the little kingdom, have three children—Prince Leopold, heir-apparent; Charles Theodore, Count of Flanders, and Princess Marie Jose.

Even before the war Elizabeth had already shown her concern for her subjects. On one occasion at a mine disaster in 1911 the queen quietly but quickly made up a supply train and rushed unceremoniously to the scene. For days she worked as a nurse, catering the homes of the poor miners and caring for the suffering—her identity unknown.

With the outbreak of war in 1914 she devoted her time to caring for wounded soldiers on the field and in camp. She traveled with other nurses, occupied quarters with them and did her work with them. Thousands of dollars from her own money she spent in thus serving the victims of the German heel.

Elizabeth was a princess of Bavaria. But from the day she was married to Albert in Munich in 1900 she never returned to visit her kin. Tours were made in other countries, and when last she saw Austria lined with German against the country of her adoption, she pledged her fidelity to the Belgians forever.

Albert was born in 1875. He was the youngest child of the Count and Countess of Flanders, the Count's brother being King Leopold II. Prince Baudouin, born in 1869, and who would have succeeded to the throne, died at 22 years. There were also two princesses in the family—Princess Henriette and Princess Josephine. Josephine died in infancy.

Philip, count of Flanders, was a lover of art, a taste of which was transferred to Albert. The countess was Princess Marie of Hohenzollern. Her family was only distantly related to the Hohenzollerns of the recent regime.

Genealogists point out that Marie was of the elder Swabian line, which branched from the junior or Francan line—that to which the former king belongs—in 1243.

Albert, like other European princes was schooled for the army. He attended the National Military Academy at Brussels and later took course in law, diplomacy and literature at the University of Louvain. In school he took considerable part in athletics and a few years after he left school he voluntarily took up engineering.

The king is fond of horseback riding, likes boating, shooting and hunting. In mechanics he became quite expert, himself building a number of airplanes, and running locomotives, automobiles and even working on mines.

In public the king is noticeably nervous and hesitating in speech. His whole person, however, seems to vibrate in with the sentiment of his soul.

Democratically, Americans who have seen him say he has no equal.

In London a few years ago, it was related, he quite frequently visited garages and showrooms of the large motor factories. One day he ordered two automobiles to be sent to him in Brussels.

"What name?" asked the proprietor. "Albert," laconically replied the king.

"Albert who?"

"King."

Shortly afterward the cars were delivered to his palace at Brussels addressed: "To Albert King, Esq."

The youthful heir-apparent to the throne is a wiry, lanky boy like his father was. He is 18 years old, and he is said to be quite the image of Albert as he was in younger days. He like his hero father has been trained in schools with other boys, lately having finished a course at Eton college, England.

Charles, count of Flanders, taking his grandfather's name, is 16 years old. The Princess Marie Jose is 13. In 1896 King Albert visited the United States and in company with the late James J. Hill he toured the northwest country around St. Paul and Minneapolis and west. He worked as a reporter for a weekly newspaper while in the Twin Cities. He was much feted in Washington.

Similarly he went disguised as a newspaper reporter to Belfast in 1905 and studied at first hand conditions of Irish peasantry.

The king belongs to the Catholic party of Belgium. Opposed to him are the socialists and the liberals. At a demonstration on the opening of parliament in 1911 the king barely escaped injury when radical members stoned his palace adjoining the congress halls just before he delivered his set speech. When a test vote was taken in the house the king and the Catholics were upheld and the government kept in power.

One of the first trips the king made after his coronation was a visit to Berlin. A few months afterward the Kaiser and entourage repaid the visit, receiving considerable attention in Brussels. After that, however, there was little communication between the rulers, numerous incidents occurring which separated them.

The activities of the king on the field of battle with his troops defeating his little country against the onslaught of the Germans in 1914 made him acclaimed as most democratic and beloved of kings. His visit to America is in the nature of a mission to thank the nation for aid given in both food and money that saved probably thousands of lives.

ARKANSAS TOWN
HAS SERIOUS RACE
RIOT 8 ARE KILLED

HELENA, ARK., Oct. 2.—Race rioting resumed early today at Elaine. Near here, resulted in the wounding of 3 to 6 men according to telephone reports.

Three workmen and five negroes were killed yesterday and several were injured. The trouble started when a white officer was shot and killed from ambush yesterday. Five hundred soldiers arrived at Elaine early today to aid the local authorities in quelling race riots. Reports from Elaine stated that two men and seven negroes had been killed in the rioting and several others injured. Women and children were brought to the city from the rioting one today.

Race trouble started when W. A. Adkins, special railroad agent was shot and killed from ambush while accompanying Detective Pratt to arrest a negro on a minor charge. Reports were then circulated of alleged negro plans to rise against the white residents in the southern portion of Phillips county. Special deputies were sworn in by Sheriff Kitchen and sent to Elaine. Two of these were killed. Reports stated authorities in Elaine arrested 100 negroes and one white man. The latter was accused of distributing questionable literature. The jail has been placed under heavy guard in order to prevent an attempt to liberate the prisoners.

BOXING BOUT AT PARK

Indications point to a banner crowd of sports at the Athletic meet in the Expo building at the Driving park tonight.

Kid McCoy, who is a middle weight, arrived in town from Altoona this morning and looks fit as a fiddle. The Griffin, the local hope, has been training hard for the go and promises his friends to give them a real run for their money.

The preliminaries will also be top notchers while that battle royal will be worth the price of admission alone.

Announcement concerning the coming wrestling match between Roberts of Boardman and Hayatt, the California champ, in anger Edwards' ring will be made at the ringside during the evening. Admission $1.00; boys under 16, 50c.

Bill Fairman Aily Defends DuBois "Corn Doctor" Accused of Assaulting His Patient

SHERIFF GORMAN ON TRIAL

The jury in the Andre case convicted the defendant of statutory rape and non-support of his illegitimate child. A laugh was furnished the spectators when the attorneys were making their pleas to the jury in this case. Mr. Woodward, for the defense, attempted a biblical quotation and while his text was all to the good, his choice of language scaled only about 275 per cent as to accuracy. Messrs. Arnold and Chase, for the prosecution, giggled audibly at their opponent's fall from grace, so to speak, and decided among themselves just what the exact words of the quotation were. When Woodward completed his remarks and Mr. Chase arose to make the Commonwealth's plea, he started out by saying, "Well, gentlemen of the jury, I guess you will no doubt agree with me when I say that Mr. Woodward is a much better lawyer than he is a biblical student," and calling to mind the scriptural quotation used by the opposing attorney, cited the error and attempted to correct it. He also supplied a term not found in the original, and when all hands laughed, Chase looked accusingly at Arnold, who had prompted him on the text, but the latter guiltily refused to meet his accusing eye, and the balance of that argument was devoid of scriptural references. That jury, several of whom were "real sharks" on the scriptures, are satisfied that as biblical raconteurs, Messrs. Woodward, Chase and Arnold are all good attorneys.

The case of Com. vs. Tom Harris, which was tried before Judge Bell Tuesday afternoon, caused more or less interest and amusement. Col. Bill Fairman, of Punksatuney, was the attorney for the defense, and the Col. can always be counted upon to add a little spice to the proceedings.

In this case, Charles Cyphert had Harris arrested for assault and battery, the action growing out of an altercation which occurred at the turn-

MAIL PLANE PUTS
UP HERE FOR NIGHT
FOG STOPS FLIGHT

Max Miller, pilot of one of the government's regular mail planes swooped down out of the murky atmosphere in and about Clearfield at 5 o'clock last evening, creating more or less excitement and sending many people scurrying to the park to see the machine, it being thought that he had come to earth at that point. However, appearances are deceitful in the flying game and while Mr. Miller was looking for a landing place and did nose down to examine the park grounds he decided they were too small for his machine and, rising again soared over the hills and finally settled down safely and without incident in a field on the Troxell farm about one mile from Mineral Spring, near Woodland.

In conversation with Pilot Miller last evening he stated that he was forced to descend because he could fly no longer and was unable to reach the flying field at Bellefonte on account of the fog and adverse weather conditions. He said he had started from Cleveland yesterday morning and after reaching the Allegheny river was forced to return the fog being so dense he was unable to make his way through. At noon he was advised by wire from Bellefonte that the weather had cleared and he made another start during the afternoon. He ran into the fog again beyond DuBois but was able to reach that town, although the visibility was low. At DuBois he got his bearings and followed the B. & P. tracks over the mountains to Clearfield. Here he found the conditions so bad he was forced to land for the night. After getting to earth safely he came into town and spent the night at The Timeling, resuming his journey this morning.

Max Miller is the oldest pilot, in point of service on this route and was the original pathfinder between New York and Cleveland when the course was being mapped out.

ist bath establishment in DuBois. The defendant is employed at the boiling out institution and also operates as a "corn contractor," or chiroloist. Cyphert had Harris operate upon his corn, and in the course of an argument following the operation, stated that Harris was a "damn nigger" and a failure as a corn doctor. Harris alleged the prosecutor's corn growth was due to soil and fertilizer accumulation and absence of soap and water, and the blow which constituted

UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President Wilson's condition was unchanged according to late official statement issued by Dr. Grayson. The bad weather today made it likely that the President would have to forego his usual automobile ride.

Specialist Called for President

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President Wilson's condition this morning was not at all good, according to a statement issued by Dr. Grayson, his physician. The statement said "the President has had a fairly good night but his condition is not at all good this morning." Dr. Grayson called into consultation Dr. F. X. Berton, of Philadelphia, a nerve specialist. The President is in a highly nervous condition it was stated although no alarming symptoms have developed.

His physician has trouble in keeping him away from work. Dr. Grayson also has been in conference with Dr. C. R. Phillips and Dr. Dennis, both of the Navy it was learned.

Dr. Grayson emphasized that he would call in assistance as a precautionary measure and a help as the treatment of the President requires more time than one man can give, it was stated.

SENATE COMMITTEE WILL VISIT THE
STRIKE DISTRICT IF NOT SETTLED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Delay in the settlement of the steel strike will result in the Senate committee carrying out its intended plans to visit the steel district, Judge E. H. Gary was told when he resumed his testimony before the committee today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—A compromise or arbitration of the steel strike was flatly spurned by E. H. Gary before the Senate Labor committee today. "Don't talk of compromise or arbitration at the present time," Gary declared. Immediately before his refusal to arbitrate Gary had said in reply to a question by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts that he was prepared to meet union leaders in an attempt to settle the steel strike which the Senate is investigating.

GUEST AT SOLDIERS' HOME
YOUNGEST SOLDIER IN CIVIL WAR

Bernard Brady, who is now a resident of the United States Soldiers' Home at Washington, has sent official papers from the War department to the Pennsylvania State capitol which officials of the state government believe make him the youngest soldier of the Civil War in the Union armies. The documents, which have been passed upon by the Adjutant General of the United States army, give the age of Brady when enlisting as a drummer boy in the Fifty-Eighth Pennsylvania volunteers as eight years and eleven months, although his enlistment papers gave his age as fifteen. Brady's claim makes him younger than several other men who became notable as youthful soldiers in the army of the Union, among them the late Captain John C. Delaney, long state factory inspector; John Clemm, the western veteran who figured at the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg and Daniel A. Clemmens, a Lancaster countian who enlisted in the Seventy-Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers July 13, 1863, after following the regiment for some time because his father was one of the soldiers. The Brady papers which are supported by the War department notation and a certificate of his baptism at a Catholic church in Newark, show that he enlisted at Suffolk, Va., October 17, 1862, giving his age as fifteen; but that he was born in New Jersey, October 29, 1853, and baptised the following November 30. After the war Brady went to Wyoming county, but soon entered the regular army, serving in the Fourth and other infantry regiments. While in the army he lost a leg and for years has lived at the Soldiers' Home. Jacob Stauffer, of the Adjutant General's department, who has looked up many records of soldiers, believes that Brady can safely lay claim to being the youngest soldier. He is familiar with records of many Pennsylvanians and has followed up the Brady and other claims. Officers of the Adjutant General's department have also studied the papers and Adjutant General Frank D. Beary intends to see the veteran when in Washington.

In regard to the war record of Bernard Brady, the inmate of the Soldiers Home at Washington who seems to have become a soldier in a Pennsylvania regiment in the Civil War while under nine years of age, a friend says that the late Captain John C. Delaney, one of the youngest men in the Civil War, was born in 1848 and came out of the army one of the youngest lieutenants known. He was not thirteen when he went into the army. Daniel A. Clemmens, Jr., who enlisted with his father in a Lancaster regiment, tells an interesting story. His father was a private in the same regiment and used to carry the rations for his son, who was company drummer, in his haversack. The younger Clemmens followed the regiment and was finally taken on as a drummer when eleven years, four months and fifteen days of age. The mustering officer put him on as fourteen although he was born February 28, 1852. He was in the battle of Chickamauga and marched with Sherman to the sea.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—Washington today is on the tip of expectation in anticipation of the arrival of the royal party from Belgium. While King Albert, with Queen Elizabeth and the Crown Prince, are by no means the first royal visitors to be received in the capital, their visit nevertheless will be a very important one in the eyes of the people.

The jury believed the prosecutor and acquitted the defendant of the assault and battery charge, but divided the costs, two thirds to be paid by the defendant and the other third by the prosecutor.

The case of Commonwealth vs. A. M. Gorman was taken up before Judge Whitehead Wednesday morning. Sheriff Gorman is charged by George H. Max-

Exchange Greetings.

When General Pershing halted his parade and held all New York waiting for fifteen minutes, while he ran over to greet Cardinal Mercier, every eye in the dense crowds was fastened on the two striking figures of the Soldier of the Cross and the Soldier of the Sword. The heroic Catholic prelate who had defied all the armies of the Kaiser, bent eagerly forward to grasp both hands of the smiling military chief who had led our army to bend back from Belgium the Hun invaders. For this moment, a racing transport had hurried the Belgian churchman over to the port of New York, only a few hours before the Pershing parade began to march. He had come to this country to thank Americans for their support of his oppressed people, and he had begun his mission most happily by being able to thank John I. Pershing, first of all.

High Churchman of Devastated Country Will Express
Thanks of His People at Conference of Hierarchy.

Cardinal Mercier will find convened the entire hierarchy of the Catholic Church in this country. Cardinal Gibbons has called all the heads of his church together to take counsel as to the best way to aid this country in solving its post-war problems through the National Catholic War Council. Now that the grim exigencies of warfare are ended, the Catholic Church may rechristen its organization for national service the "National Catholic Welfare Council."

In all its plans for future activities for the nation's good, this historical gathering of church heads will listen eagerly to the voice of the great Belgian prelate whom Pershing delighted to honor.

Some of our senators are evidently getting anxious for a little joyride to Pittsburgh to see the steel mills.

We are curious to know whether some of our professed Christians will practice the charity they preach when it comes time to give a dollar to the Jewish Relief.

Pitiless publicity certainly cut a hole in the incomes of some of those political leeches who have been in the habit of holding up every candidate for a contribution. One fellow who made an awful haul two years ago got only $20 this primary.

And now it is Arkansas that is having its trouble with race riots. Sobriety of speech and calm deliberation on the part of good citizens will go a long way toward stopping these unfortunate occurrences.

Every true American will want to see Albert, King of the Belgians. Not because he is a king for a king hardly gets any attention from a real American—except in checkers. It is Albert, the MAN, that the true American admires.

ABOUT JUDGE GARY

New York, Oct. 1.—Elbert H. Gary, in whose hands the directors of the United States Steel Corporation have placed full control of the strike situation, has been the real head of the great corporation from the day that it was formed. Schwab, Corey and Farrell, it is true, have been the presidents of the corporation in turn, but as chairman of the finance committee and of the board of directors, Gary has been the real power.

He has been described as "the obedient Caesar of an empire which owns more land than the States of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont; supports more people than there are in Nebraska; employs more men than fought at Gettysburg; sails a larger navy than that of some of the prominent Powers; and represents more capital than all the banks in the city of New York."

One week from today Elbert H. Gary will enter upon his seventy-fourth year. He first saw the light of day in DuPage county, Illinois, and he began life as a farmer's boy. He got all that could be had in the public schools of his county, and then took the full term at Wheaton College.

It was largely through his legal work that his talents as an organizer of big industries first came in to recognition. These talents were given full scope in the formation of the American Steel and Wire Company, which included the makers of 75 per cent of the entire steel-rod and wire products of the country, and which now is one of the component parts of the United States Steel Corporation.

The success of this enterprise encouraged him to proceed to the greater work of organizing the United States Steel Corporation—a company which should control the output of steel, rails, pig iron and other products of the iron mines. His theory was that by owning the mines, manufactories and means of transportation the work of the company could be more efficiently and economically done than by leaving these separate departments in the hands of many concerns.

Gary was chosen by the late J. P. Morgan to head the board of directors of the great corporation, and his continuance in office while Schwab and Corey were being dethroned marked the passing of the Carnegie influence and the complete dominance of the Morgan house.

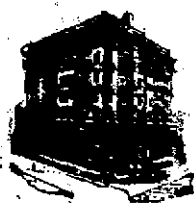

He has the reputation of being less conservative than the average multi-millionaire, which was evidenced in 1911, when he advocated before the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives, the Federal control of manufactures. He stated that this, with complete publicity, would effectually prevent overcharging.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SPRING TURKEYS.

"Hello, my children," said Father Turkey, one bright spring day.

"Hello, dad," said the little turkeys.

"You're spring turkeys, aren't you?" asked their father.

"I suppose we are," said one of the turkeys. "It's fine to be any sort of a turkey in this nice world where we get such good things to eat."

"You must be careful not to get your feet wet, you know," said Father Turkey.

"Yes," said the little turkeys, "mother was telling us to be very careful not to get our feet wet for the first four weeks of our lives, for if we do we will never be strong or well turkeys, and if we're careful—well, we will be strong and well turkeys."

The little turkey drew a long breath, for he had said all that without stopping.

Father Turkey laughed and said: "Well, anyway, you know just what you should do. Your mother teaches you well."

"Why did you ask us if we were spring turkeys, dad?" asked the little turkeys. "Didn't you know whether we were or not?"

"Yes, I knew," said their father, "but I wondered if you had heard of the autumn and of Thanksgiving."

"No, mother hasn't told us about Thanksgiving," said the little turkeys. "Is Thanksgiving something to eat, daddy?"

"No," gobbled Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving is something which eats us. That is we are supposed to be good food for Thanksgiving and for Christmas, too."

"We are going to be eaten?" asked the little turkeys, in frightened voices. "Cheer up, little turkeys," said Father Turkey. "It sounds quite dreadful to you now, but it won't when I explain it to you. And it is best for me to explain it to you than for some one else who doesn't know and understand the whole thing."

"You see," said Father Turkey, "Thanksgiving day is a day when they give thanks for all the fine things they have in this world. When some people came over to this country years and years ago they set aside a day upon which to give thanks for their safe arrival in this land."

"Well, it's a day which is kept year after year, and in order to celebrate it in great style they have turkeys to eat. It's a great honor they pay us. And they also have turkeys for Christmas which is a day still greater than Thanksgiving day."

"And more than the compliment that they pay us is the fact that we're fed so well and given so much to eat before Thanksgiving day that we never have to hunt for our food; we are given all the goodies we want, and we are made fat in the most delightful fashion."

"To be sure, all of us aren't eaten, but it doesn't matter whether we are or not, for we don't know it when we are, and we do know all about the delightful days beforehand, when we eat and eat and eat and gobble and gobble and gobble."

"When your mother was looking after you I kept watch all the time to see that no harm came to you. I warned her whenever danger was near."

"I will teach you how to roost in the trees, and I will teach you how to put your heads under your wings."

"That probably your mother has already taught you these two things. So I will just have a good time with you and chat with you and gobble with you."

"You're a fine father," said the little turkeys.

"But you can still call yourselves spring turkeys," said their father, "because it is still spring, and it will be a long time before Thanksgiving day, and the following holiday, Christmas, and the snow and the cold weather."

"Yes, you're spring turkeys, you're father's own nice spring turkeys, and it will only be one more week before you can walk wherever you want, for you will be four weeks old, and after the first four weeks little turkeys don't have to be so careful."

And the spring turkeys gobbled and said that life sounded and seemed very pleasant.

That's True.

The teacher had been telling her class about the rhinoceros family. "Now, name some things," she said, "that are very dangerous to get near to and that have horns."

"Motor cars," promptly answered Johnny.

Better Days

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Cuddled up like a mouse, lying upon a rude board bench at the side of an abandoned switch shanty, her hand supporting her head and enmeshed in a mass of loose golden tresses, the girl, fast asleep, wore a smile upon her face as though her dreams were pleasant ones.

She could not have been over eighteen and her worn and ragged shoes and crinkled ribbons were not in accord with the general neatness of her attire. A man lurched by, young like herself, paused and stared hard.

"Well, this is a new one!" he muttered. "I say, little one, wake up! This old switch yard is no place for you."

He had touched one hand lying loosely over the edge of the bench. The girl aroused so magically quick and her big blue eyes opened so wide and challenging that Myron Trask retreated a step or two.

"That is the 6:15 western dispatch, isn't it—can you tell me?"

"I can," nodded Trask, "but what have you to do with the 6:15?"

"To get into an empty car. It goes to Meriden, my home town, and that is the only way, unless I walk."

"I see you have done something in that line already," suggested Trask, glancing at her broken shoes, one heelless and its side ripped by a nail splitter, the other with a flapping sole.

"Yes, clear from Chicago, I can't go barefooted as I will soon be if I keep on tramping, so I was going to steal my way."

Myron Trask took a silent survey of the forlorn little figure. He steadied himself erect and breathed hard through compressed lips. "See here, Miss," he said finally, "I had a sister once, and you've set me thinking. Tell me a little about yourself and maybe I can help you on your way."

"Why, yes, I'll tell you all about it," said the girl with ingenuous frankness. "My name is Irma Dabziel. I have been filling a little speaking part in 'Hearts and Homes.' Good people, they were, from the manager down. I ran away from home to join them. They went to pieces last week and there wasn't enough left to pay my fare. I've written father and mother that I am through with my foolish dream of becoming a great actress and am on my way back to the dear old place I'll never leave again. Oh never—never—never!"

So long, so intense, so rapturous were the accents, so vivid, so rapturous did they frame within the mentality of Myron Trask, that he seemed to covet such a paradise of relief and joy, as if for himself, for Trask was on the sent of contrition and repentance at the present time.

"Strange, Miss," he said in an uncertain tone, "but you and I seem to be in the same boat. I got my dismissal from service last week for going on a bout with the crowd. The read may or may not take me back, but no more of the reckless and silly for me. I've got no money, but the hotel will give Myron Trask anything he wants, and you're going to go there with me and get a good meal. Then you are going to the depot and wait for the 8:15 passenger. I'll put you in charge of old Royd Westley, the conductor. He'll see you onto the branch at Aberdeen. At that terminus you'll have only fifty-six miles on the Northern. And when you get back to your dear little home, stay there, and once in a while think of the railroad lads, rough and ready, and sometimes reckless, but with hearts as big as pumpkins when they see a woman needing help."

"Why you almost make me cry," said Irma soberly. "You'd make a star hit on the stage with such a human interest speech as that. I'll never forget you."

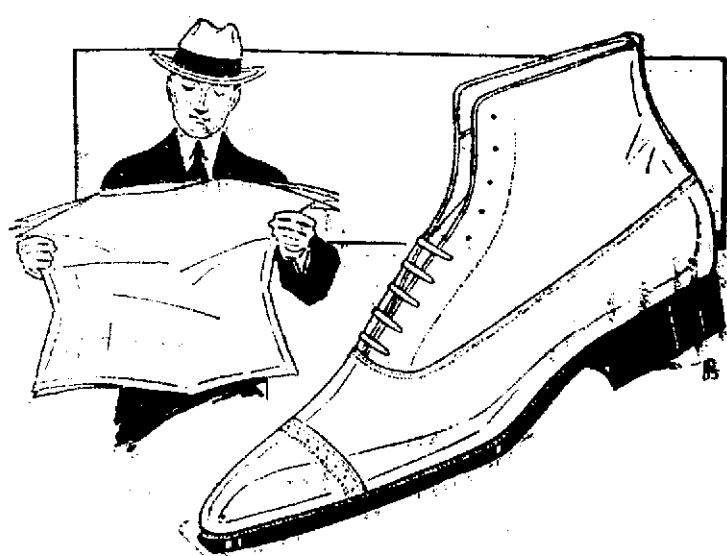

"Maybe I'd have made a better record and kept straight if I had been lucky enough to run across a girl like you," said Myron, with a slight catch in his voice, as he bade her goodbye at the depot. "Show this card to whatever conductor you run across," and he handed her a bit of pasteboard upon which he had scrawled a few words. "I'm not much just now, but my name will go as far as that of the president of the road with my true pals."

A sudden rush of tears came to the eyes of Irma as she clasped the hand of her benefactor. She leaned towards him and impulsively kissed his bronzed, hard-toughened face with the words: "How your dear sister must have loved you!" Then a moment later she waved adieu to him through an open coach window and for a long time after the train had gone Myron Trask stood reflecting, gazing at the cheek where that warm kiss of gratitude had been bestowed.

It was noticeable by the former reckless comrades of Myron later that he eschewed their company and idleness. By some influence he became reinstated with the road and asked for a position as station agent and his chosen post was the little town where Irma lived.

She was not a dull girl and she discerned a motive in his seeking to be near her. He was frank and outspoken and he emphasized the why and wherefore by a free confession when they had become better acquainted. And so they were married.

Miss Cling has returned from a pleasant visit with her parents in Tyne.

NASH QUAD HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Slips Off Road Into Woods. Climbs Back Again Over Trees, Logs, Stumps And Boulders

Day before yesterday we took a NASH QUAD up to the coal mine near the McPherson farm on Montgomery Run. In getting up to the mine, we slipped off the road. Down through the brush and trees, pell mell, taking everything before us.

Then came the problem—how shall we get it back on the road? Simple as could be. Here's where the four-wheel drive came in. We climbed into the driver's seat, started the engine, and the way that QUAD walked up that hill and on to the road was only equalled by some of the performances of the NASH QUADS "over there."

enko with assault and battery, the charge growing out of a difficulty which occurred while the Sheriff was dispossessing Mazenko, at the Merchants' Hotel at Coalport some two or three months ago. Miller and Hurtswick represent the prosecution and Smith and Smith and A. R. Chase the defense.

The jury in the case of Com. vs. Sink and Hunter, the DuBois men, who were charged by C. W. Cleaver, of Grampian, with false pretense, returned a verdict of guilty against both defendants late yesterday evening. The defendants sold the prosecutor a motor truck which belonged to the McKnight Coal company and after several payments had been made on the purchase price the car company secured a writ of replevin and took the truck away from the purchaser. There were some knotty legal points involved in the case which was prosecuted by A. M. Liveright while Pentz & Pentz represented the defense.

The jury in the case of Com. vs. J. A. Dutra and Harold Woods, who were charged by Ellis Passmore with pointing firearms, and assault, returned their verdict at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, after an all night struggle. This case was given the jury just after dinner yesterday. They found Mr. Dutra guilty of assault and while they acquitted Woods on both counts, they directed that he pay one-half the costs.

Walter Johnson, the young married man of DuBois, who is charged by Miss Ollie Corp, or Union township, with felonious rape, was placed on trial before Judge Bell this morning. District Attorney Arnold is prosecuting Johnson while Gleason & Brockbank are defending him.

The alleged crime was committed near Rockton on Sunday afternoon, July 13th, on or near the public road leading from Rockton toward Home Camp. On this occasion Miss Corp was returning to her home in the country after attending Sunday school at Rockton. She says that Johnson who had been picking huckleberries in the vicinity was tinkering with his automobile on the road. When she came up to where he was Johnson invited her to go for a ride with him and upon her refusal to do so he seized her and throwing her to the ground assaulted her.

Johnson was arrested a couple of days after the alleged crime was committed and when taken before Miss Corp she identified him as her assailant.

The case against Johnson was worked up by Constable Joseph Leslie, of Union township, who is assisting in the prosecution.

The following cases are scheduled for trial in criminal court during Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week:

Commonwealth vs. Bailey, David A. and B.
Commonwealth vs. Boukelski, Liquor Law.
Commonwealth vs. Beink, Larceny.
Commonwealth vs. Carlson, Concealed Weapons.
Commonwealth vs. Corson, Larceny.

Commonwealth vs. Jukes, A. and B.
Commonwealth vs. Moyle, Liquor Law.
Commonwealth vs. Nolan, Adultery, Rape.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Dr. and Mrs. Cravens, of Shelas, Wash., are guests in the home of Miss Julia and Clifford McLaughlin, Bloomington avenue, several days this week. The doctor was on his way to New York to attend a clinic of celebrated physicians being held in that city.

The Loyal Order of Moose, of Curwensville, has reopened its charter for a term of three months, making the membership fee about one half the price of admission, as heretofore. An active campaign will at once be started to increase this organization's membership, and when it is over, it is expected that the roll will contain over five hundred active members.

Zelot Strickland left on Tuesday night for Cincinnati, Ohio, to watch the first two of the world's series games played. Lote is a finished ball fan and has all of the points and kinks of the game at his finger tips.

Mr. Thad Cassidy, head fireman at the finishing tannery, is taking a much needed vacation.

Any one wishing to see as fine a concrete sidewalk as was ever put down in this borough, should go and examine the walk put down by Howard Pratt, in front of the W. D. Gates new store building on Filbert street. It is a mechanical job and a substantial one as well.

Curwensville citizens have not heard that new curfew bell ring yet. Has this ordinance, like some thirty or forty others, passed into oblivion so soon?

A portion of Main street seems to be a favorite spot for lads, whose ages range from 10 to 16 years, for kicking a football, seemingly to have no regard in tramping over the well kept lawns of residents who reside in proximity to their sport.

Not a large audience greeted Rev. D. S. Dine in the Lutheran Church Tuesday evening, although those who were present, declare that his discourse was fine and they enjoyed every minute of it. Mr. Dine has been absent from Curwensville a good many years, and the people have changed, which leads us to repeat the old adage, "out of sight, out of mind."

Mrs. Chas. McLaughlin, who went to Endicott, N. Y., several months ago, is now an inmate in the Wellboro sanitarium, undergoing treatment for rheumatism.

The condition of Mrs. William Holden is now considered to be serious, and some of her friends intimate that they do not expect her to live the present month out. She is afflicted with cancer and the disease has taken such a hold that she is past medical salvation.

The Red Men had a gala time in their hall last evening. Together with the installation of officers, and the smoker afterwards, events moved along at a lively rate, and the members enjoyed the time so well, the home hour arrived before many were aware of it.

TRINITY METHODIST PLANNING GOOD SOCIAL EVENT

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Methodist Church will meet on Thursday, instead of in the afternoon as has been the custom in their monthly meetings.

It will be a social time for all the members of the church and their friends. There will be a "community sing" of the old hymns of the church, with Mr. L. W. Lawrence as leader. Some of the well known readers of the church will give selections of a popular nature.

The women will serve ice cream, cake and coffee for the sum of twenty cents. The men, both old and young, as well as the women of the church, are expected to be present, assured that they will enjoy the program, the refreshments and the fellowship. Remember, Thursday evening.

Tonight the quarterly love-feast will be held, preparatory to the communion on next Sunday.

NOTICE

The Community Bridge will meet at the home of Miss Ella Goodfellow Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

Circle Games for Parties and Picnics

By Louise Proctor
Director of Physical Training for Women
The University of Illinois

Have you ever noticed how popular the girl who can always think of good "tag" games to play at a big party or picnic? Circle games are best of all. "Slap-jack" is always fun. Join hands in one large or two smaller circles. One player runs outside the circle and tags another. The player tagged immediately runs in the opposite direction. Both try to get back to the vacant place first. The one that doesn't is left outside, and so must tag somebody else and run again. This can be played by having the players bow or shake hands when they meet, or by making them walk instead of run.

"Flying Dutchman" is really double "Slap-jack." The players join hands and stand in the circle, and two are chosen to be runners. The runners also join hands and, running around the circle, tag any two hands. Each couple tries to get back to the vacant place first.

"Two Deep" is another good one. A tagger and a runner are chosen to be "it." The one who is being chased tries to save herself by taking a place in front of anyone in the circle. This player immediately becomes the runner. If the runner is tagged before she can get in front of another player, she, of course, becomes the tagger.

"Dodge Ball" is one of the most popular double circle games. Those in the inside circle step forward, forming a scattered group. The players in the outside circle try to hit those on the inside with the ball. Anyone hit is out of it. The inner players score on the basis of the number left in the ring when time is called. The two teams then change places, and the others see if they can run up a higher score.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys
says if Bladder bothers you—
Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritations.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus ending serious kidney disease.

How to Block and Tackle

By E. B. Jones, Athletic Director
The University of Wisconsin

Blocking is the most important point in determining the strength of a team on offense. To be effective it must be hard and low, making sure that the man is out of the play.

Four methods, illustrated below, are commonly used. The shoulder block is used by the lineman for opening holes and by the backfielder for interference. There is a great temptation to use the hands but this is illegal. In the body block try to land with arm and foot outside your opponent's feet thus extending your blocking area. In the Indian Roll it is illegal to swing the leg too high. Drag it along the ground. This block may be very quick or your man will jump over you.

A team that can tackle well is never beaten by a large score. Two things are needed: first, know when to tackle; second, follow the ball to get a chance. Use your head to figure which way the man is going to run. Oftentimes you can force him out of bounds (see diagram). In tackling always try to keep the back straight and one foot on the ground. There are three main classes of tackles:

Front Tackle, usually made by a lineman. Keep your balance, holding your weight low. It is well to avoid stiff arm. Drive in low with a shoulder to the man, following this up with a leg drive. Aim at his knees and clasp them right in your arms with hands closed, lifting and throwing your weight against him.

Side Tackle, usually made in the open. If in the open, slow up when about five yards from the runner to be ready for dodging. It is important in this tackle to keep your head in front of his body. Tackling from behind requires nerve. The common fault is not getting close enough. Make a dive, with your head to either side of his feet. A good tackler must be able to shift in any direction. A hard tackle is safer than an easy one.

Banker's View of Europe's Future

Plan Gigantic Combination of Capital to Finance Business Revival in Stricken Lands

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—That Europe's dilapidated finances should be bolstered up as a business proposition, good for the American people, rather than as an act of charity, is the consensus of opinion among leading banking houses of Wall Street.

To ascertain the attitude of financial men towards Europe's situation, a number of financial men were asked for their opinions regarding European trade. The opinion was unanimous that goods should be sent to Europe on long-time credit, until enough goods are produced on the other side of the Atlantic to even up trade balances.

Financial men deny that an embargo on goods going to Europe would reduce prices in the United States, though they agree that American prices are soaring because of the cost of living in Europe. They contend that prices will not drop here until they have come down in the most important European countries, regardless of the surplus supplies which would pile up here if an embargo were placed.

As proof of their assertions, the Wall Street economists point to the embargo in certain goods, such as sugar, for example, enormous quantities of which are ready to be shipped. Some goods are already in ships, which cannot be sailed. Exporters who have bought these goods for shipment are simply holding onto them.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that conditions cannot become permanently stable in one part of the world until Europe is settled. Shipments of food and materials to Europe which will enable that continent to re-establish normal living conditions, ordinarily less expensive than those of America, will result in an influx of goods to America at reduced rates. This would bring American costs down permanently.

When Aviator Max Miller circled low over the town last evening searching for a landing place for his plane he called to a group of boys on the hill back of the foundry saying, "hey, kids, where is a good place to land?" One quick-witted young American quickly replied "On the ground."

So confident are some bankers of the advantage of putting Europe on its feet that they propose an enormous combination, to be made up of all the larger financial institutions of America. This organization could finance all countries according to their needs, and could see that the smaller nations get on their feet.

The leaders of this plan say that under a competitive system, credit for the larger and stronger countries would be furnished by the stronger banks in America, at normal rates of interest. Weaker countries, being less secure investments, would be forced to pay high rates which they cannot afford. In addition they would probably have to go to weaker banks. This arrangement would be bad for both debtors and creditors, it is held, and might cause an unstable condition of the money market for some time.

That Wall street and other New York financial interests are not doubtful of Europe's ability to "come back" is shown by the way bankers are preparing to lend credit. Many are speculating in foreign exchange while the dollar buys so many French francs or German marks, placing the money on deposit in Paris or Berlin at interest, and waiting until Europe's money climbs nearer normal, when prospects are considered good by many for doubling on the speculation.

An Internal Treatment For Piles (Hemorrhoids)

Gives Absolute relief from all pain and suffering. Has never failed Guaranteed

Many people have become dependent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless and that there was no remedy for their case. On your druggist and get an original bottle of Miro Pile Remedy, the discovery of a clever Ohio chemist, that taken internally, passes unchanged through the stomach and intestines, and thus reaches the source of the trouble where by its soothing, healing, anti-septic action it first allays and then by direct contact with the piles causes them to heal and disappear forever. It's positively marvelous how speedily it acts. Busted relief often comes in two or three days, even a case that has lasted all previously known treatments really wonderful results have been accomplished. It is one of the wonderful discoveries of recent years and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. All pharmacists dispense Miro or can get it for you on short notice. Surely it is worth the little trouble to obtain to be rid of piles forever.

IMPORTANT: What is known as itching piles are not piles in the true sense of the word, although this condition may accompany a true case of piles. For this condition Miro Pile Remedy has been prepared as in such cases it is not necessary to take the internal prescription.

AMERICANS PROUD TO
WELCOME KING ALBERTHEROIC SACRIFICING LEADER OF BRAVE
LITTLE NATION LANDS ON AMERICAN
SOIL TODAY

FAMOUS FOR DEEDS OF VALOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—The world's greatest democracy today welcomed loyalty's greatest democrat, King Albert, of Belgium. For the first time in history a king trod American soil when King Albert stepped ashore off the steamer George Washington at noon. American officialdom who planned to give the King his consort and heir, a royal welcome witnessed his landing through a down pour of rain.

BELGIAN RULERS ARRIVE

HOBOKEN, Oct. 2.—King Albert, of Belgium, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Leopold landed here at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon.

FORT HANCOCK, Oct. 2.—The steamer George Washington with King Albert and the royal party aboard left Sandy Hook and started up the lower bay shortly after nine o'clock this morning. She was expected to pass quarantine about 10:30 a. m.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2. (United Press).—King Albert of Belgium and his queen Elizabeth, arrived here today on their long-anticipated visit to the United States.

As they came up the bay they were given one of the most vociferous applause ever accorded a foreign visitor. Sirens screeched and thousands of boat and factory whistles, tooted out a noisy welcome to the heroic rulers of the little nation Germany trampled under foot.

They will visit several cities in various parts of the country after they have been feted here.

Albert was crowned on the death of his uncle, King Leopold II, the old king's only son having died. Albert and his queen, Elizabeth, who endeavored themselves by their heroic efforts to alleviate the sufferings of their subjects during the German occupation of the little kingdom, have three children—Prince Leopold, heir-apparent; Charles Theodore, Count of Flanders, and Princess Marie Jose.

Even before the war Elizabeth had already shown her concern for her subjects. On one occasion at a mine disaster in 1911 the queen quietly but quickly made up a supply train and rushed unceremoniously to the scene. For days she worked as a nurse, catering the homes of the poor miners and caring for the suffering—her identity unknown.

With the outbreak of war in 1914 she devoted her time to caring for wounded soldiers on the field and in camp. She traveled with other nurses, occupied quarters with them and did her work with them. Thousands of dollars from her own money she spent in thus serving the victims of the German heel.

Elizabeth was a princess of Bavaria. But from the day she was married to Albert in Munich in 1900 she never returned to visit her kin. Tours were made in other countries, and when last she saw Austria lined with German against the country of her adoption, she pledged her fidelity to the Belgians forever.

Albert was born in 1875. He was the youngest child of the Count and Countess of Flanders, the Count's brother being King Leopold II. Prince Baudouin, born in 1869, and who would have succeeded to the throne, died at 22 years. There were also two princesses in the family—Princess Henriette and Princess Josephine. Josephine died in infancy.

Philip, count of Flanders, was a lover of art, a taste of which was transferred to Albert. The countess was Princess Marie of Hohenzollern. Her family was only distantly related to the Hohenzollerns of the recent regime.

Genealogists point out that Marie was of the elder Swabian line, which branched from the junior or Francan line—that to which the former king belongs—in 1243.

Albert, like other European princes was schooled for the army. He attended the National Military Academy at Brussels and later took course in law, diplomacy and literature at the University of Louvain. In school he took considerable part in athletics and a few years after he left school he voluntarily took up engineering.

The king is fond of horseback riding, likes boating, shooting and hunting. In mechanics he became quite expert, himself building a number of airplanes, and running locomotives, automobiles and even working on mines.

In public the king is noticeably nervous and hesitating in speech. His whole person, however, seems to vibrate in with the sentiment of his soul.

Democratically, Americans who have seen him say he has no equal. In London a few years ago, it was related, he quite frequently visited garages and showrooms of the large motor factories. One day he ordered two automobiles to be sent to him in Brussels.

"What name?" asked the proprietor. "Albert," laconically replied the king.

"Albert who?"

"King."

Shortly afterward the cars were delivered to his palace at Brussels addressed: "To Albert King, Esq."

The youthful heir-apparent to the throne is a wiry, lanky boy like his father was. He is 18 years old, and he is said to be quite the image of Albert as he was in younger days. He like his hero father has been trained in schools with other boys, lately having finished a course at Eton college, England.

Charles, count of Flanders, taking his grandfather's name, is 16 years old. The Princess Marie Jose is 13.

In 1896 King Albert visited the United States and in company with the late James J. Hill he toured the northwest country around St. Paul and Minneapolis and west. He worked as a reporter for a weekly newspaper while in the Twin Cities. He was much feted in Washington.

Similarly he went disguised as a newspaper reporter to Belfast in 1905 and studied at first hand conditions of Irish peasantry.

The king belongs to the Catholic party of Belgium. Opposed to him are the socialists and the liberals. At a demonstration on the opening of parliament in 1911 the king barely escaped injury when radical members stoned his palace adjoining the congress halls just before he delivered his set speech. When a test vote was taken in the house the king and the Catholics were upheld and the government kept in power.

One of the first trips the king made after his coronation was a visit to Berlin. A few months afterward the Kaiser and entourage repaid the visit, receiving considerable attention in Brussels. After that, however, there was little communication between the rulers, numerous incidents occurring which separated them.

The activities of the king on the field of battle with his troops defeating his little country against the onslaught of the Germans in 1914 made him acclaimed as most democratic and beloved of kings. His visit to America is in the nature of a mission to thank the nation for aid given in both food and money that saved probably thousands of lives.

ARKANSAS TOWN
HAS SERIOUS RACE
RIOT 8 ARE KILLED

HELENA, ARK., Oct. 2.—Race rioting resumed early today at Elaine, near here, resulted in the wounding of 3 to 6 men according to telephone reports.

Three workmen and five negroes were killed yesterday and several were injured. The trouble started when a white officer was shot and killed from ambush yesterday. Five hundred soldiers arrived at Elaine early today to aid the local authorities in quelling race riots. Reports from Elaine stated that two men and seven negroes had been killed in the rioting and several others injured. Women and children were brought to the city from the rioting one today.

Race trouble started when W. A. Atkins, special railroad agent was shot and killed from ambush while accompanying Detective Pratt to arrest a negro on a minor charge. Reports were then circulated of alleged negro plans to rise against the white residents in the southern portion of Phillips county. Special deputies were sworn in by Sheriff Kitchen and sent to Elaine. Two of these were killed. Reports stated authorities in Elaine arrested 100 negroes and one white man. The latter was accused of distributing questionable literature. The jail has been placed under heavy guard in order to prevent an attempt to liberate the prisoners.

BOXING BOUT AT PARK

Indications point to a banner crowd of sports at the Athletic meet in the Expo building at the Driving park tonight.

Kid McCoy, who is a middle weight, arrived in town from Altoona this morning and looks fit as a fiddle. The Griffin, the local hope, has been training hard for the go and promises his friends to give them a real run for their money.

The preliminaries will also be top notchers while that battle royal will be worth the price of admission alone.

Announcement concerning the coming wrestling match between Roberts of Boardman and Hayatt, the California champ, in anger Edwards' ring will be made at the ringside during the evening. Admission $1.00; boys under 16, 50c.

GOOD LAWYERS
BUT SHORT ON SCRIPTURE

SHERIFF GORMAN ON TRIAL

The jury in the Andre case convicted the defendant of statutory rape and non-support of his illegitimate child. A laugh was furnished the spectators when the attorneys were making their pleas to the jury in this case. Mr. Woodward, for the defense, attempted a biblical quotation and while his text was all to the good, his choice of language scaled only about 275 per cent as to accuracy. Messrs. Arnold and Chase, for the prosecution, giggled audibly at their opponent's tall from grace, so to speak, and decided among themselves just what the exact words of the quotation were. When Woodward completed his remarks and Mr. Chase arose to make the Commonwealth's plea, he started out by saying, "Well, gentlemen of the jury, I guess you will no doubt agree with me when I say that Mr. Woodward is a much better lawyer than he is a biblical student," and calling to mind the scriptural quotation used by the opposing attorney, cited the error and attempted to correct it. He also supplied a term not found in the original, and when all hands laughed, Chase looked accusingly at Arnold, who had prompted him on the text, but the latter guiltily refused to meet his accusing eye, and the balance of that argument was devoid of scriptural references. That jury, several of whom were "real sharks" on the scriptures, are satisfied that as biblical raconteurs, Messrs. Woodward, Chase and Arnold are all good attorneys.

The case of Com. vs. Tom Harris, which was tried before Judge Bell Tuesday afternoon, caused more or less interest and amusement. Col. Bill Fairman, of Punksatwney, was the attorney for the defense, and the Col. can always be counted upon to add a little spice to the proceedings.

In this case, Charles Cyphert had Harris arrested for assault and battery, the action growing out of an altercation which occurred at the turn-

MAIL PLANE PUTS

Max Miller, pilot of one of the government's regular mail planes swooped down out of the murky atmosphere in and about Clearfield at 5 o'clock last evening, creating more or less excitement and sending many people scurrying to the park to see the machine, it being thought that he had come to earth at that point. However, appearances are deceitful in the flying game and while Mr. Miller was looking for a landing place and did nose down to examine the park grounds he decided they were too small for his machine and, rising again soared over the hills and finally settled down safely and without incident in a field on the Troxell farm about one mile from Mineral Spring, near Woodland.

In conversation with Pilot Miller last evening he stated that he was forced to descend because he could fly no longer and was unable to reach the flying field at Bellefonte on account of the fog and adverse weather conditions. He said he had started from Cleveland yesterday morning and after reaching the Allegheny river was forced to return the fog being so dense he was unable to make his way through. At noon he was advised by wire from Bellefonte that the weather had cleared and he made another start during the afternoon. He ran into the fog again beyond DuBois but was able to reach that town, although the visibility was low. At DuBois he got his bearings and followed the B. & P. tracks over the mountains to Clearfield. Here he found the conditions so bad he was forced to land for the night. After getting to earth safely he came into town and spent the night at The Timeling, resuming his journey this morning.

ist bath establishment in DuBois. The defendant is employed at the boiling out institution and also operates as a "corn contractor," or chiroloist. Cyphert had Harris operate upon his corn, and in the course of an argument following the operation, stated that Harris was a "damn nigger" and a failure as a corn doctor. Harris alleged the prosecutor's corn growth was due to soil and fertilizer accumulation and absence of soap and water, and the blow which constituted

UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President Wilson's condition was unchanged according to late official statement issued by Dr. Grayson. The bad weather today made it likely that the President would have to forego his usual automobile ride.

Specialist Called for President

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President Wilson's condition this morning was not at all good, according to a statement issued by Dr. Grayson, his physician. The statement said "the President has had a fairly good night but his condition is not at all good this morning." Dr. Grayson called into consultation Dr. F. X. Berton, of Philadelphia, a nerve specialist. The President is in a highly nervous condition it was stated although no alarming symptoms have developed.

His physician has trouble in keeping him away from work. Dr. Grayson also has been in conference with Dr. C. R. Phillips and Dr. Dennis, both of the Navy it was learned.

Dr. Grayson emphasized that he would call in assistance as a precautionary measure and a help as the treatment of the President requires more time than one man can give, it was stated.

SENATE COMMITTEE WILL VISIT THE
STRIKE DISTRICT IF NOT SETTLED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2. Delay in the settlement of the steel strike will result in the Senate committee carrying out its intended plans to visit the steel district, Judge E. H. Gary was told when he resumed his testimony before the committee today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—A compromise or arbitration of the steel strike was flatly spurned by E. H. Gary before the Senate Labor committee today. "Don't talk of compromise or arbitration at the present time," Gary declared. Immediately before his refusal to arbitrate Gary had said in reply to a question by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts that he was prepared to meet union leaders in an attempt to settle the steel strike which the Senate is investigating.

GUEST AT SOLDIERS' HOME
YOUNGEST SOLDIER IN CIVIL WAR

Bernard Brady, who is now a resident of the United States Soldiers' Home at Washington, has sent official papers from the War department to the Pennsylvania State capitol which officials of the state government believe make him the youngest soldier of the Civil War in the Union armies. The documents, which have been passed upon by the Adjutant General of the United States army, give the age of Brady when enlisting as a drummer boy in the Fifty-Eighth Pennsylvania volunteers as eight years and eleven months, although his enlistment papers gave his age as fifteen. Brady's claim makes him younger than several other men who became notable as youthful soldiers in the army of the Union, among them the late Captain John C. Delaney, long state factory inspector; John Clemm, the western veteran who figured at the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg and Daniel A. Clemmens, a Lancaster countian who enlisted in the Seventy-Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers July 13, 1863, after following the regiment for some time because his father was one of the soldiers. The Brady papers which are supported by the War department notation and a certificate of his baptism at a Catholic church in Newark, show that he enlisted at Suffolk, Va., October 17, 1862, giving his age as fifteen; but that he was born in New Jersey, October 29, 1853, and baptised the following November 30. After the war Brady went to Wyoming county, but soon entered the regular army, serving in the Fourth and other infantry regiments. While in the army he lost a leg and for years has lived at the Soldiers' Home. Jacob Stauffer, of the Adjutant General's department, who has looked up many records of soldiers, believes that Brady can safely claim to be the youngest soldier. He is familiar with records of many Pennsylvanians and has followed up the Brady and other claims. Officers of the Adjutant General's department have also studied the papers and Adjutant General Frank D. Beary intends to see the veteran when in Washington.

In regard to the war record of Bernard Brady, the inmate of the Soldiers Home at Washington who seems to have become a soldier in a Pennsylvania regiment in the Civil War while under nine years of age, a friend of the Union, among them the late Captain John C. Delaney, long state factory inspector; John Clemm, the western veteran who figured at the 50th anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg and Daniel A. Clemmens, a Lancaster countian who enlisted in the Seventy-Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers July 13, 1863, after following the regiment for some time because his father was one of the soldiers. the assault followed. District Attorney Arnold was prosecuting the case, and Colonel Bill sort of pulled one over on the energetic public prosecutor, when he called Mr. Arnold as a character witness for the defense. After testifying that he lived in Clearfield, was married, and possessed a growing family and had never been arrested and a defendant in this court, the District Attorney was compelled to say that the defendant bore a first class reputation.

The jury believed the prosecutor and acquitted the defendant of the assault and battery charge, but divided the costs, two thirds to be paid by the defendant and the other third by the prosecutor.

The case of Commonwealth vs. A. M. Gorman was taken up before Judge Whitehead Wednesday morning. Sheriff Gorman is charged by George Max-

Thousands View Dramatic Scene as Pershing
Clasps Hands With Belgians' Heroic PrimateWhole City Kept Waiting While Soldier of the Sword and Soldier of the Cross
Exchange Greetings.

When General Pershing halted his parade and held all New York waiting for fifteen minutes, while he ran over to greet Cardinal Mercier, every eye in the dense crowds was fastened on the two striking figures of the Soldier of the Cross and the Soldier of the Sword. The heroic Catholic prelate who had defied all the armies of the Kaiser, bent eagerly forward to grasp both hands of the smiling military chief who had led our army to bend back from Belgium the Hun invaders. For this moment, a racing transport had hurried the Belgian churchman over to the port of New York, only a few hours before the Pershing parade began to march. He had come to this country to thank Americans for their support of his oppressed people, and he had begun his mission most happily by being able to thank John I. Pershing, first of all.

Far overseas, in the devastated fields of his home land, Cardinal Mercier first met General Pershing, in the days when the work of the warrior was the only hope of the scattered flock over which his heroic spiritual shepherd stood guard. Since then the Soldier of the Sword has helped push back the depredators of Belgium, and the Soldier of the Cross has bent his energies to rehabilitating the ruined land.

From America, squads of welfare workers, trained and sent by the National Catholic War Council, have come to the aid of the Cardinal. When he has formally expressed his thanks to the whole American nation, he will hurry to Washington to thank the heads of this national war working body of his church for all that they have done in establishing schools and various welfare units throughout his country.

To welcome him at the Capital, Cardinal Mercier will find convened the entire hierarchy of the Catholic Church in this country. Cardinal Gibbons has called all the heads of his church together to take counsel as to the best way to aid this country in solving its post-war problems through the National Catholic War Council. Now that the grim exigencies of warfare are ended, the Catholic Church may rechristen its organization for national service the "National Catholic Welfare Council."

In all its plans for future activities for the nation's good, this historical gathering of church heads will listen eagerly to the voice of the great Belgian prelate whom Pershing delighted to honor.

CAPITAL AWAITS
ROYAL VISITORS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 2.—Washington today is on the tip of expectation in anticipation of the arrival of the royal party from Belgium. While King Albert, with Queen Elizabeth and the Crown Prince, are by no means the first royal visitors to be received in the capital, their visit nevertheless will be a very important one. The exception of the late King Leopold II, the Belgian monarch, who never before has visited the United States, the royal party from Belgium is the first to be received in the capital. The royal party is expected to arrive in the capital on Friday, October 3, and will be met by the President and the Vice President. The royal party is expected to stay in the capital for several days before departing for other parts of the United States.

Some of our senators are evidently getting anxious for a little joyride to Pittsburgh to see the steel mills.

We are curious to know whether some of our professed Christians will practice the charity they preach when it comes time to give a dollar to the Jewish Relief.

Pitiless publicity certainly cut a hole in the incomes of some of those political leeches who have been in the habit of holding up every candidate for a contribution. One fellow who made an awful haul two years ago got only $20 this primary.

And now it is Arkansas that is having its trouble with race riots. Sobriety of speech and calm deliberation on the part of good citizens will go a long way toward stopping these unfortunate occurrences.

Every true American will want to see Albert, King of the Belgians. Not because he is a king for a king hardly gets any attention from a real American—except in checkers. It is Albert, the MAN, that the true American admires.

ABOUT JUDGE GARY

New York, Oct. 1.—Elbert H. Gary, in whose hands the directors of the United States Steel Corporation have placed full control of the strike situation, has been the real head of the great corporation from the day that it was formed. Schwab, Corey and Farrell, it is true, have been the presidents of the corporation in turn, but as chairman of the finance committee and of the board of directors, Gary has been the real power.

He has been described as "the obedient Caesar of an empire which owns more land than the States of Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont; supports more people than there are in Nebraska; employs more men than fought at Gettysburg; sails a larger navy than that of some of the prominent Powers; and represents more capital than all the banks in the city of New York."

One week from today Elbert H. Gary will enter upon his seventy-fourth year. He first saw the light of day in DuPage county, Illinois, and he began life as a farmer's boy. He got all that could be had in the public schools of his county, and then took the full term at Wheaton College.

It was largely through his legal work that his talents as an organizer of big industries first came in to recognition. These talents were given full scope in the formation of the American Steel and Wire Company, which included the makers of 75 per cent of the entire steel-rod and wire products of the country, and which now is one of the component parts of the United States Steel Corporation.

The success of this enterprise encouraged him to proceed to the greater work of organizing the United States Steel Corporation—a company which should control the output of steel, rails, pig iron and other products of the iron mines. His theory was that by owning the mines, manufactories and means of transportation the work of the company could be more efficiently and economically done than by leaving these separate departments in the hands of many concerns.

Gary was chosen by the late J. P. Morgan to head the board of directors of the great corporation, and his continuance in office while Schwab and Corey were being dethroned marked the passing of the Carnegie influence and the complete dominance of the Morgan house.

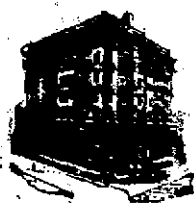

He has the reputation of being less conservative than the average multi-millionaire, which was evidenced in 1911, when he advocated before the ways and means committee of the House of Representatives, the Federal control of manufactures. He stated that this, with complete publicity, would effectually prevent overcharging.

Will You Induce Danger Or Safety?

If you have money lying idle, at home, in the store or office—aren't you courting danger and robbery?

When the Clearfield National with its safe, strong vaults and its banking service promoting order and safety doesn't cost a single penny—isn't it wise to use its protection. And it is an added convenience as well.

Why let such a service stand between you and safety?

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SPRING TURKEYS.

"Hello, my children," said Father Turkey, one bright spring day.

"Hello, dad," said the little turkeys.

"You're spring turkeys, aren't you?" asked their father.

"I suppose we are," said one of the turkeys. "It's fine to be any sort of a turkey in this nice world where we get such good things to eat."

"You must be careful not to get your feet wet, you know," said Father Turkey.

"Yes," said the little turkeys, "mother was telling us to be very careful not to get our feet wet for the first four weeks of our lives, for if we do we will never be strong or well turkeys, and if we're careful—well, we will be strong and well turkeys."

The little turkey drew a long breath, for he had said all that without stopping.

Father Turkey laughed and said: "Well, anyway, you know just what you should do. Your mother teaches you well."

"Why did you ask us if we were spring turkeys, dad?" asked the little turkeys. "Didn't you know whether we were or not?"

"Yes, I knew," said their father, "but I wondered if you had heard of the autumn and of Thanksgiving."

"No, mother hasn't told us about Thanksgiving," said the little turkeys.

"Is Thanksgiving something to eat, daddy?"

"No," gobbled Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving is something which eats us. That is we are supposed to be good food for Thanksgiving and for Christmas, too."

"We are going to be eaten?" asked the little turkeys, in frightened voices.

"Cheer up, little turkeys," said Father Turkey. "It sounds quite dreadful to you now, but it won't when I explain it to you. And it is best for me to explain it to you than for some one else who doesn't know and understand the whole thing."

"You see," said Father Turkey, "Thanksgiving day is a day when they give thanks for all the fine things they have in this world. When some people came over to this country years and years ago they set aside a day upon which to give thanks for their safe arrival in this land."

"Well, it's a day which is kept year after year, and in order to celebrate it in great style they have turkeys to eat. It's a great honor they pay us. And they also have turkeys for Christmas which is a day still greater than Thanksgiving day."

"And more than the compliment that they pay us is the fact that we're fed so well and given so much to eat before Thanksgiving day that we never have to hunt for our food; we are given all the goodies we want, and we are made fat in the most delightful fashion."

"To be sure, all of us aren't eaten, but it doesn't matter whether we are or not, for we don't know it when we are, and we do know all about the delightful days beforehand, when we eat and eat and eat and gobble and gobble and gobble."

"When your mother was looking after you I kept watch all the time to see that no harm came to you. I warned her whenever danger was near."

"But probably your mother has already taught you these two things. So I will just have a good time with you and chat with you and gobble with you."

"You're a fine father," said the little turkeys.

"But you can still call yourselves spring turkeys," said their father, "because it is still spring, and it will be a long time before Thanksgiving day, and the following holiday, Christmas, and the snow and the cold weather."

"Yes, you're spring turkeys, you're father's own nice spring turkeys, and it will only be one more week before you can walk wherever you want, for you will be four weeks old, and after the first four weeks little turkeys don't have to be so careful."

And the spring turkeys gobbled and said that life sounded and seemed very pleasant.

That's True.

The teacher had been telling her class about the rhinoceros family. "Now, name some things," she said, "that are very dangerous to get near to and that have horns."

"Motor cars," promptly answered Johnny.

Better Days

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Cuddled up like a mouse, lying upon a rude board bench at the side of an abandoned switch shanty, her hand supporting her head and enmeshed in a mass of loose golden tresses, the girl, fast asleep, wore a smile upon her face as though her dreams were pleasant ones.

She could not have been over eighteen and her worn and ragged shoes and crinkled ribbons were not in accord with the general neatness of her attire. A man lurched by, young like herself, paused and stared hard.

"Well, this is a new one!" he muttered. "I say, little one, wake up! This old switch yard is no place for you."

He had touched one hand lying loosely over the edge of the bench. The girl aroused so magically quick and her big blue eyes opened so wide and challenging that Myron Trask retreated a step or two.

"That is the 6:15 western dispatch, isn't it—can you tell me?"

"I can," nodded Trask, "but what have you to do with the 6:15?"

"To get into an empty car. It goes to Meriden, my home town, and that is the only way, unless I walk."

"I see you have done something in that line already," suggested Trask, glancing at her broken shoes, one heelless and its side ripped by a nail splinter, the other with a flapping sole.

"Yes, clear from Chicago, I can't go barefooted as I will soon be if I keep on tramping, so I was going to steal my way."

Myron Trask took a silent survey of the forlorn little figure. He steadied himself erect and a breathless hard through compressed lips. "See here, Miss," he said finally, "I had a sister once, and you've set me thinking. Tell me a little about yourself and maybe I can help you on your way."

"Why, yes, I'll tell you all about it," said the girl with ingenuous frankness. "My name is Irma Dabziel. I have been filling a little speaking part in 'Hearts and Homes.' Good people, they were, from the manager down. I ran away from home to join them. They went to pieces last week and there wasn't enough left to pay my fare. I've written father and mother that I am through with my foolish dream of becoming a great actress and am on my way back to the dear old place I'll never leave again. Oh never—never—never!"

So long, so intense, so rapturous were the accents, so vivid, so rapturous did they frame within the mentality of Myron Trask, that he seemed to covet such a paradise of relief and joy, as if for himself, for Trask was on the sent of contrition and repentance at the present time.

"Strange, Miss," he said in an uncertain tone, "but you and I seem to be in the same boat. I got my dismissal from service last week for going on a bout with the crowd. The read may or may not take me back, but no more of the reckless and silly for me. I've got no money, but the hotel will give Myron Trask anything he wants, and you're going to go there with me and get a good meal. Then you are going to the depot and wait for the 8:15 passenger. I'll put you in charge of old Royd Westley, the conductor. He'll see you onto the branch at Aberdeen. At that terminus you'll have only fifty-six miles on the Northern. And when you get back to your dear little home, stay there, and once in a while think of the railroad lads, rough and ready, and sometimes reckless, but with hearts as big as pumpkins when they see a woman needing help."

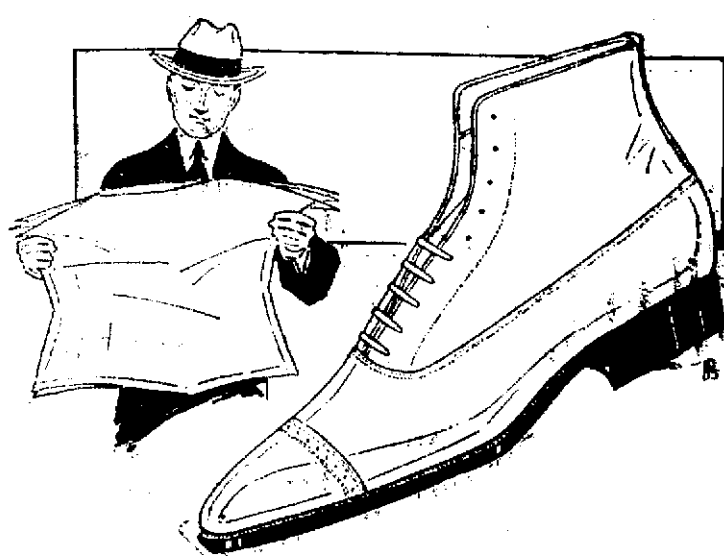

"Why you almost make me cry," said Irma soberly. "You'd make a star hit on the stage with such a human interest speech as that. I'll never forget you."

"Maybe I'd have made a better record and kept straight if I had been lucky enough to run across a girl like you," said Myron, with a slight catch in his voice, as he bade her goodbye at the depot. "Show this card to whatever conductor you run across," and he handed her a bit of pasteboard upon which he had scrawled a few words. "I'm not much just now, but my name will go as far as that of the president of the road with my true pals."

A sudden rush of tears came to the eyes of Irma as she clasped the hand of her benefactor. She leaned towards him and impulsively kissed his bronzed, hard-toughened face with the words: "How your dear sister must have loved you!" Then a moment later she waved adieu to him through an open coach window and for a long time after the train had gone Myron Trask stood reflecting, caressing the cheek where that warm kiss of gratitude had been bestowed.

It was noticeable by the former reckless comrades of Myron later that he eschewed their company and idleness. By some influence he became reinstated with the road and asked for a position as station agent and his chosen post was the little town where Irma lived.

She was not a dull girl and she discerned a motive in his seeking to be near her. He was frank and outspoken and he emphasized the why and wherefore by a free confession when they had become better acquainted. And so they were married.

NASH QUAD HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Slips Off Road Into Woods. Climbs Back Again Over Trees, Logs, Stumps And Boulders

Day before yesterday we took a NASH QUAD up to the coal mine near the McPherson farm on Montgomery Run. In getting up to the mine, we slipped off the road. Down through the brush and trees, pell mell, taking everything before us.

Then came the problem—how shall we get it back on the road? Simple as could be. Here's where the four-wheel drive came in. We climbed into the driver's seat, started the engine, and the way that QUAD walked up that hill and on to the road was only equalled by some of the performances of the NASH QUADS "over there."

enko with assault and battery, the charge growing out of a difficulty which occurred while the Sheriff was dispossessing Mazenko, at the Merchants' Hotel at Coalport some two or three months ago. Miller and Hurtswick represent the prosecution and Smith and Smith and A. R. Chase the defense.

The jury in the case of Com. vs. Sink and Hunter, the DuBois men, who were charged by C. W. Cleaver, of Grampian, with false pretense, returned a verdict of guilty against both defendants late yesterday evening. The defendants sold the prosecutor a motor truck which belonged to the McKnight Coal company and after several payments had been made on the purchase price the car company secured a writ of replevin and took the truck away from the purchaser. There were some knotty legal points involved in the case which was prosecuted by A. M. Liveright while Pentz & Pentz represented the defense.

The jury in the case of Com. vs. J. A. Dutra and Harold Woods, who were charged by Ellis Passmore with pointing firearms, and assault, returned their verdict at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, after an all night struggle. This case was given the jury just after dinner yesterday. They found Mr. Dutra guilty of assault and while they acquitted Woods on both counts, they directed that he pay one-half the costs.

Walter Johnson, the young married man of DuBois, who is charged by Miss Ollie Corp, or Union township, with felonious rape, was placed on trial before Judge Bell this morning. District Attorney Arnold is prosecuting Johnson while Gleason & Brockbank are defending him.

The alleged crime was committed near Rockton on Sunday afternoon, July 13th, on or near the public road leading from Rockton toward Home Camp. On this occasion Miss Corp was returning to her home in the country after attending Sunday school at Rockton. She says that Johnson who had been picking huckleberries in the vicinity was tinkering with his automobile on the road. When she came up to where he was Johnson invited her to go for a ride with him and upon her refusal to do so he seized her and throwing her to the ground assaulted her.

Johnson was arrested a couple of days after the alleged crime was committed and when taken before Miss Corp she identified him as her assailant.

The case against Johnson was worked up by Constable Joseph Leslie, of Union township, who is assisting in the prosecution.

The following cases are scheduled for trial in criminal court during Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week:

Commonwealth vs. Bailey, David, A. and B.
Commonwealth vs. Boukelski, Liquor Law.
Commonwealth vs. Beink, Larceny.
Commonwealth vs. Carlson, Concealed Weapons.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Dr. and Mrs. Cravens, of Shelas, Wash., are guests in the home of Miss Julia and Clifford McLaughlin, Bloomington avenue, several days this week. The doctor was on his way to New York to attend a clinic of celebrated physicians being held in that city.

The Loyal Order of Moose, of Curwensville, has reopened its charter for a term of three months, making the membership fee about one half the price of admission, as heretofore. An active campaign will at once be started to increase this organization's membership, and when it is over, it is expected that the roll will contain over five hundred active members.

Zelotis Strickland left on Tuesday night for Cincinnati, Ohio, to watch the first two of the world's series games played. Lote is a finished ball fan and has all of the points and kinks of the game at his finger tips.

Mr. Thad Cassidy, head fireman at the finishing tannery, is taking a much needed vacation.

Any one wishing to see as fine a concrete sidewalk as was ever put down in this borough, should go and examine the walk put down by Howard Pratt, in front of the W. D. Gates new store building on Filbert street. It is a mechanical job and a substantial one as well.

Curwensville citizens have not heard that new curfew bell ring yet. Has this ordinance, like some thirty or forty others, passed into oblivion so soon?

A portion of Main street seems to be a favorite spot for lads, whose ages range from 10 to 16 years, for kicking a football, seemingly to have no regard in tramping over the well kept lawns of residents who reside in proximity to their sport.

Not a large audience greeted Rev. D. S. Dine in the Lutheran Church Tuesday evening, although those who were present, declare that his discourse was fine and they enjoyed every minute of it. Mr. Dine has been absent from Curwensville a good many years, and the people have changed, which leads us to repeat the old adage, "out of sight, out of mind."

Mrs. Chas. McLaughlin, who went to Endicott, N. Y., several months ago, is now an inmate in the Wellboro sanitarium, undergoing treatment for rheumatism.

The condition of Mrs. William Holden is now considered to be serious, and some of her friends intimate that they do not expect her to live the present month out. She is afflicted with cancer and the disease has taken such a hold that she is past medical salvation.

The Red Men had a gala time in their hall last evening. Together with the installation of officers, and the smoker afterwards, events moved along at a lively rate, and the members enjoyed the time so well, the home hour arrived before many were aware of it.

TRINITY METHODIST PLANNING GOOD SOCIAL EVENT

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity Methodist Church will meet on Thursday, instead of in the afternoon as has been the custom in their monthly meetings.

It will be a social time for all the members of the church and their friends. There will be a "community sing" of the old hymns of the church, with Mr. L. W. Lawrence as leader. Some of the well known readers of the church will give selections of a popular nature.

The women will serve ice cream, cake and coffee for the sum of twenty cents. The men, both old and young, as well as the women of the church, are expected to be present, assured that they will enjoy the program, the refreshments and the fellowship. Remember, Thursday evening.

Tonight the quarterly love-feast will be held, preparatory to the communion on next Sunday.

NOTICE

The Community Bridge will meet at the home of Miss Ella Goodfellow Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

Circle Games for Parties and Picnics

By Louise Proctor
Director of Physical Training for Women
The University of Illinois

Have you ever noticed how popular the girl who can always think of good "tag" games to play at a big party or picnic? Circle games are best of all. "Slap-jack" is always fun. Join hands in one large or two smaller circles. One player runs outside the circle and tags another. The player tagged immediately runs in the opposite direction. Both try to get back to the vacant place first. The one that doesn't is left outside, and so must tag somebody else and run again. This can be played by having the players bow or shake hands when they meet, or by making them walk instead of run.

"Flying Dutchman" is really double "Slap-jack." The players join hands and stand in the circle, and two are chosen to be runners. The runners also join hands and, running around the circle, tag any two hands. Each couple tries to get back to the vacant place first.

"Two Deep" is another good one. A tagger and a runner are chosen to be "it." The one who is being chased tries to save herself by taking a place in front of anyone in the circle. This player immediately becomes the runner. If the runner is tagged before she can get in front of another player, she, of course, becomes the tagger.

"Dodge Ball" is one of the most popular double circle games. Those in the inside circle step forward, forming a scattered group. The players in the outside circle try to hit those on the inside with the ball. Anyone hit is out of it. The inner players score on the basis of the number left in the ring when time is called. The two teams then change places, and the others see if they can run up a higher score.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys
says if Bladder bothers you—
Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritations.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus ending serious kidney disease.

How to Block and Tackle

By E. B. Jones, Athletic Director
The University of Wisconsin

Blocking is the most important point in determining the strength of a team on offense. To be effective it must be hard and low, making sure that the man is out of the play.

Four methods, illustrated below, are commonly used. The shoulder block is used by the lineman for opening holes and by the backfielder for interference. There is a great temptation to use the hands but this is illegal. In the body block try to land with arm and foot outside your opponent's feet thus extending it is illegal to swing the leg too high. Drag it along the ground. This block must be very quick or your man will jump over you.

A team that can tackle well is never beaten by a large score. Two things are needed: first, know when to tackle; second, follow the ball to get a chance. Use your head to figure which way the man is going to run. Oftentimes you can force him out of bounds (see diagram). In tackling always try to keep the back straight and one foot on the ground. There are three main classes of tackles:

Front Tackle, usually made by a lineman. Keep your balance, holding your weight low. It is well to avoid stiff arm. Drive in low with a shoulder to the man, following this up with a leg drive. Aim at his knees and clasp them right in your arms with hands closed, lifting and throwing your weight against him.

Side Tackle, usually made in the open. If in the open, slow up when about five yards from the runner to be ready for dodging. It is important in this tackle to keep your head in front of his body. Tackling from behind requires nerve. The common fault is not getting close enough. Make a dive, with your head to either side of his feet. A good tackler must be able to shift in any direction. A hard tackle is safer than an easy one.

Banker's View of Europe's Future

Plan Gigantic Combination of Capital to Finance Business Revival in Stricken Lands

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—That Europe's dilapidated finances should be bolstered up as a business proposition, good for the American people, rather than as an act of charity, is the consensus of opinion among leading banking houses of Wall Street.

To ascertain the attitude of financial men towards Europe's situation, a number of financial men were asked for their opinions regarding European trade. The opinion was unanimous that goods should be sent to Europe on long-time credit, until enough goods are produced on the other side of the Atlantic to even up trade balances.

Financial men deny that an embargo on goods going to Europe would reduce prices in the United States, though they agree that American prices are soaring because of the cost of living in Europe. They contend that prices will not drop here until they have come down in the most important European countries, regardless of the surplus supplies which would pile up here if an embargo were placed.

As proof of their assertions, the Wall Street economists point to the embargo in certain goods, such as sugar, for example, enormous quantities of which are ready to be shipped. Some goods are already in ships, which cannot be sailed. Exporters who have bought these goods for shipment are simply holding onto them.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that conditions cannot become permanently stable in one part of the world until Europe is settled. Shipments of food and materials to Europe which will enable that continent to re-establish normal living conditions, ordinarily less expensive than those of America, will result in an influx of goods to America at reduced rates. This would bring American costs down permanently.

Bankers also point out the advantage of buying credit in Europe at this time when America would receive enormous prices for goods. The credit would remain credit, since Europe has no gold to pay, until it is paid back in goods manufactured in Europe. These goods would be sold to Americans at much reduced prices, if European conditions become normal and stabilized, and American capital would benefit by the drop.

So confident are some bankers of the advantage of putting Europe on its feet that they propose an enormous combination, to be made up of all the larger financial institutions of America. This organization could finance all countries according to their needs, and could see that the smaller nations get on their feet.

The leaders of this plan say that under a competitive system, credit for the larger and stronger countries would be furnished by the stronger banks in America, at normal rates of interest. Weaker countries, being less secure investments, would be forced to pay high rates which they cannot afford. In addition they would probably have to go to weaker banks. This arrangement would be bad for both debtors and creditors, it is held, and might cause an unstable condition of the money market for some time.

That Wall street and other New York financial interests are not doubtful of Europe's ability to "come back" is shown by the way bankers are preparing to lend credit. Many are speculating in foreign exchange while the dollar buys so many French francs or German marks, placing the money on deposit in Paris or Berlin at interest, and waiting until Europe's money climbs nearer normal, when prospects are considered good by many for doubling on the speculation.

The average small boy apparently gives little thought as to wherewithal he shall be clothed—clothes being the least of his troubles. But if any fond mother has visions of decking him out in things that differ much from the clothes worn by his average, everyday school fellow, she might as well banish them first as last. Men and boys are less independent in the matter of clothes than women and girls are. This is because they come in for a lot of frank ridicule from their fellows the minute they do anything unusual in the way of dressing.

Here are two suits for school boys—the kind they like. They are made of good qualities of woolen goods with two pairs of knickerbockers to each suit and boast certain small finishing touches that will please their wearers, although they are so conscious that one's attention should be called to them. For instance the patch pockets on the coat for the larger boy have flaps that button down. This is an advantage that the rough-and-tumble youngster will glow over since he will not lose his treasures, no matter what position the fortunes of war may place his anatomy in. Also a buckle, like that on the cloth belt, for some reason, has charms for the small boy, that are lacking. This suit is made of dark woolen goods, soft finish and with an indistinct pin stripe. With a stiff turn-down collar and gay-plaid tie, the boy looks very trim and well set up in it.

For the smaller boy a plain wool goods is used to make straight, short pants and a moderately long coat. This is cut with pleats at each side, and the body is set onto a yoke. A belt of the material slips through slides of it, set on and fastened with two buttons at the front to make assurance doubly sure. He may put one fastening out of commission, but hardly two of them at the same time. The turn-down collar is finished off for him with a narrow tie with tasseled ends. He may consider this tie a little extreme in style and manage to dispense with the tassels.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Don't stay gray! Nobody can tell when you darken gray, faded hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur.
Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By a long and any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur".

Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost.
This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.
A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.
